HOLD SALOON FREQUENTER IN YERION MURDER

A foreigner who works in the stockyards, lives near 31st and Halsted, and loafs around Noble's saloon at 31st street and Cottage Grove av., is being held at the Cottage Grove av. station as a suspect in the brutal slaying of Meda Yerion. Several have testified to his habit of following women. The police refused to reveal his name until they get a confession or release him.

The two "respectable" business men have been officially absolved from blame in the murder. Their part in the midnight revel which preceded Miss Yerion's slaying will not be uncovered nor will their names be revealed because it might break up their homes.

The investigation conducted from First Deputy Westbrook's office showed that Policeman John O'Halloran and John Flannagan were drinking in Noble's saloon until 2 a. m. last Friday morning when the murder was committed about 50 feet away down the alley behind the resort. William Noble, proprietor, admitted that he kept open after hours.
